"Odds against" redirects here.

In mathematical terms, where  $p$  is the probability of the outcome:

Wagering 1 at 1:1 (Evens) pays out 2 ( $1 + 1$ ) and wagering 1 at 1:2 pays out 3 ( $1 + 2$ )

That value may be regarded as the relative probability the event will happen, expressed as a fraction (if it is less than 1), or a multiple (if it is equal to or greater than 1).

For example, given that there is a pattern of odds of 5/4, 7/4, 9/4 and so on, odds which are mathematically 3/2 are more easily compared if expressed in the equivalent form 6/4.

Therefore, the decimal odds of an outcome are equivalent to the decimal value of the fractional odds plus one.

To calculate decimal odds, you can use the equation  $\text{Return} = \text{Initial Wager} \times \text{Decimal Value}$ .

Moneyline odds are often referred to as American odds.

Focus on Beating Smaller Markets

It's one of the most efficient markets in all of sports.

As many of you know, I love betting player props because it's an exploitable market.

The transition from fantasy football to the player prop market also wasn't a difficult one and the lines are so much less-efficient than spreads or totals.

Also, to be entirely honest, unless you are absolutely burying the book you won it's not get limited for a while.

Betting this amount consistently allows for variance to play out without going broke.

5, you got 1.

Thanks for reading and if you have any questions about where to start betting on sports or anything I wrote in this piece feel free to message me on twitter Con
