If neither team is favored, the point spread is listed as EVEN or PUSH.

Straight bets for evenly matched teams are frequently based on 10/11 odds or -110, which means that you are betting $11 to potentially win $10.

Defensive players can also have their own set of prop bets.

The most popular future bets for NFL football are picking a team to win the Super Bowl.

For example, if the Green Bay Packers were favorites to win the Super Bowl at the start of the season, their odds may only be +400.

Depending on the sportsbook and where you are located, future bets can be made for the Super Bowl winner, conference winners, division winners, and individual award winners.

Most online sportsbooks allow you to bet through a website or mobile app.

Some of the most popular online sportsbooks include FanDuel, DraftKings, and Caesars.
