The numbers next to the teams are called Spreads or Point-Spreads.

Opposite from the spread you'II find the Total, which represents what oddsma kers believe will be the combined number of points scored between the teams. The skill in this often requires you to forecast how a game will be wagered sin ce we often see opening lines bet up over the course of the week due to the majo rity of the money coming in on the favorite.

There's also a big rush on betting action just before the kickoff of any game, which means you may be best off waiting until kickoff approaches to get the right number.
